INTRODUCTION

Microlog: Canadian Research Index puts all of Canada's hard-to-find government and research literature at your fingertips. This monthly indexing, abstracting and document delivery service covers all levels of government in Canada, as well as institutions receiving research grants. Most titles included in Microlog are available in either paper or microfiche format. Combined with a microfiche collection, the Microlog Service is a powerful tool for finding Canadian report publications. The unique Microlog Accession Number is the key to immediate retrieval of any document.

SCOPE

Among other documents, Microlog includes research papers in physical, natural and social sciences, policy papers, important statistics, and annual reports. Every effort is made to ensure the currency of the index. For instance, documents appearing in the Checklist of Canadian Government Publications are delivered by Microlog approximately two months after publication of the list.

LANGUAGE POLICY

Documents issued in English or French are indexed and abstracted in the language of publication, while bilingual documents are indexed and abstracted in both languages.

SOURCES AND COVERAGE

Federal Documents: The Microlog editors review all checklists issued by the Canadian Government Publishing Centre and order every document relevant to the service. Except for serials, maps, pamphlets, and manuals, all monographs covered by the Federal Depository Plan are included in the index. Also, a special effort is made to track down elusive but important titles which do not appear in the lists.

Microlog offers a special collection of documents published by the Federal Government but not issued through the Federal Depository Plan. These titles, available to subscribers as the Non-Depository Publications collection, are indicated in the Titles section by a bullet (•). Microlog is also the direct distributing agent for many government bodies.

Provincial Documents: Depository arrangements with several provincial libraries have been established to ensure that Microlog subscribers receive all publications from those provinces. Where no depository arrangement exists, all publications lists issued by the province are reviewed for acquisitions.

Municipal Documents: Since these titles are very difficult to obtain, the Microlog editors make special efforts to include publications from municipal sources.

ACCESS

The Index provides access by subject, corporate or individual author, and series title.

The full Microlog file from 1979 to date, consisting of almost 50,000 records, is available online through Can/OLE. This is an ideal way to locate hard-to-find reports which may then be ordered directly online through the Can/DOCS service. Contact: Can/OLE Client Services, CISTI, Ottawa, Ontario, K1A 0S2.

FEATURES

Microlog comprises the following sections:

- 1. Titles and abstracts: A full bibliographic citation and a descriptive abstract for each title.
- 2. Name Index: Access by personal author, corporate author, and conference name.
- 3. Series Titles: Lists by title and number all reports in series in the service; series are available as an ongoing subscription or retrospective collection.
- 4. Subject Index: Descriptors based on Library of Congress and Canadiana Subject Headings are assigned to each document. A cross-referencing structure assists searchers.
- 5. Microfiche collections: Lists contents of each fiche collection for quick reference. These collections can be used as current awareness lists in broad subject areas to notify users of new acquisitions. This section is included in the annual cumulation as a separate fiched product.

MICROLOG AND CANADIAN STATISTICS INDEX

Statistical Material: The Canadian Statistics Index (CSI) provides further access to statistical material contained in Microlog monographs and special or annual reports. The CSI identification number has been included with the Microlog citation for the convenience of subscribers to the CSI fiche collection.

Annual Reports: Storage of annual reports in a single sequence has been a problem for clients in the past. The CSI numbers for annual reports are now listed in the bibliographic citation and appear on the microfiche header of each report, to make such sequencing possible.

DOCUMENT DELIVERY

Institutions may subscribe to complete or partial collections of the documents in Microlog. Individual copies on microfiche or paper reprint may be ordered through Micromedia's Document Delivery Service. To order, please contact:

INTRODUCTION

Microlog: Index de recherche du Canada met à votre disposition toutes les publications du gouvernement et les travaux de recherche difficiles à se procurer. Combiné aux collections sur microfiches, le service Microlog constitue un outil très efficace pour retrouver les publications des différents gouvernements du Canada, ainsi que celles des organismes qui reçoivent des subventions pour la recherche. Microlog est aussi un service de livraison de documents, sur microfiches ou sous forme imprimée.

CONTENU

Microlog contient entre autres des recherches en sciences physiques, naturelles et sociales, des énoncés de politique, des statistiques et des rapports annuels. Par l'intermédiaire du service Microlog, on peut obtenir les documents qui figurent sur la Liste des publications du gouvernement du Canada environ deux mois après leur parution sur cette liste.

POLITIQUE LINGUISTIQUE

Les ouvrages publiés en français ou en anglais sont indexés et résumés dans la langue de publication; les ouvrages bilingues sont traités dans les deux langues.

SOURCES

Publications fédérales: Les rédacteurs de Microlog examinent les listes émises par le Centre d'édition du gouvernement du Canada et commandent les documents pertinents. En dehors des publications en série, cartes, brochures et manuels, toutes les monographies régies par le Programme de dépôt du gouvernement fédéral figurent dans l'index, ainsi que des ouvrages importants ne figurant pas sur les listes.

Microlog propose aussi une collection spéciale de publications fédérales non déposées, identifiées par un point (•) dans la section Titres et résumés. Microlog est aussi l'agent de diffusion de nombreux organismes gouvernementaux.

Publications provinciales: Des ententes de dépôt ont été conclues avec plusieurs bibliothèques provinciales pour que les abonnés de Microlog reçoivent toutes les publications de ces provinces. Lorsqu'aucune entente n'existe, les listes de publications émises par les provinces sont examinées afin d'acquérir les documents.

Publications municipales: Ces ouvrages étant difficiles à se procurer, les rédacteurs de Microlog redoublent d'ardeur pour les inclure dans l'index.

ACCÈS

L'index imprimé est bilingue et les publications sont répertoriées par sujet, par auteur (collectivité et personne physique) et par titre de collection.

Le fichier complet de Microlog, de 1979 à aujourd'hui, contient près de 50,000 notices et est accessible sur

Can/OLE. Il s'agit d'un moyen idéal pour mettre la main sur des rapports difficiles à trouver qu'on peut commander par l'intermédiaire du service Can/DOCS. À ce propos, veuillez vous adresser au Service à la clientèle Can/OLE, ICIST, Ottawa (Ontario), K1A 0S2.

ORGANISATION DE L'INDEX

Microlog est divisé en cinq sections:

- 1. Titres et résumés: tous les titres sont catalogués et accompagnés d'un résumé descriptif.
- 2. Index des noms: donne un accès par auteur, collectivité-auteur et titre de conférence.
- 3. Titres de collections: tous les rapports publiés en série sont classés par titre et numéro. Ces collections peuvent être commandées individuellement.
- 4. Index des matières: les descripteurs permettent de trouver facilement les publications pertinentes; un réseau de renvois facilite la recherche.
- 5. Collections de microfiches: chaque collection apparaît dans une section séparée pour faciliter la recherche. Ces listes peuvent aussi servir à renseigner les usagers sur les nouveautés. Dans la refonte, cette section est insérée sous forme de microfiches.

MICROLOG ET L'INDEX DES STATISTIQUES DU CANADA

Données statistiques: L'Index des statistiques du Canada (CSI) constitue une autre source de référence sur les statistiques contenues dans certaines publications indexées dans Microlog. Celles-ci ont un numéro d'ordre spécial qui est inclus dans la référence bibliographique.

Rapports annuels: Afin de rendre le classement des rapports annuels plus facile, le numéro d'ordre CSI correspondant à ces documents figure maintenant dans les références bibliographiques et est inscrit sur les en-têtes de microfiches.

LIVRAISON DE DOCUMENTS

On peut s'abonner à l'ensemble ou à certaines des collections de documents de Microlog. On peut également commander des reproductions de documents sur microfiches ou sur papier par l'intermédiaire du service de livraison de documents de Micromedia. Pour commander, communiquer avec:

Sample CRI Search

"How can a person from a foreign country qualify for refugee status in Canada?"

The researcher can search in CRI as in any library catalogue - by subject, author and title.

Because the index is bilingual, searching can be done in English or in French.

Recherche type avec IRC

"Comment une personne d'un pays étranger peut-elle demander le statut de réfugié au Canada?"

La méthode de recherche dans IRC est la même que dans une bibliothèque, puisque les documents sont indexés par auteur, par sujet et par titre. L'index étant bilingue, la consultation peut se faire en français ou en anglais.

The increase of refugee status claiming immigrants in Canada has led to a review of the immigration policy concerning this group. This report looks at the weaknesses of current legislation which is linked to the Geneva Convention and its Protocol, studying Canada's past adherence to the rights afforded under its protection. Also discusses public and government opinion on support for a humanitarian and generous refugee policy and questions of balancing efficiency with procedural fairness to claimants. Gives a chronology of events since 1969.

STEP 2/DEUXIÈME ÉTAPE

A unified search strategy

The search strategy should include all the monthly issues. Start with the most recent issue and work back. Monthly issues are cumulated annually.

Établir une stratégie de recherche unifiée

La stratégie de recherche doit tenir compte de toutes les publications mensuelles, à commencer par les plus récentes. Chaque année, ces publications font l'objet d'une refonte.

STEP 3/TROISIÈME ÉTAPE

Retrieve the publication

Each bibliographic citation gives a full description of the relevant document. Locate the document by the microfiche number in the library's collection or order from Micromedia. Individual publications are available for purchase on microfiche or paper. The bibliographic description provides publisher source information.

Repérer la publication

Chaque notice bibliographique comprend une description complète du document; celui-ci peut être repéré grâce au numéro de microfiche de la bibliothèque; sinon, il faut le commander à Micromedia. On peut se procurer les monographies sur microfiches ou sur papier. La description bibliographique comporte également des indications sur l'éditeur.

The Cornwall low-level metals study was conducted to collect data for metals of concern, such as mercury, that will be useful in formulating remedial options for the Cornwall remedial action plan; to collect an input data set that will be useful in calibrating and validating the MINTEQA2 metal speciation model and its coupling with a fate and trans-port model such as EXAMS, which can be used to evaluate remedial options; and to continue the development and application of low-level metal techniques, begun in 1990 in Parry Sound, with field-fil-tration of metals and increased measurement of spatial resolution of metal concentrations. In July 1991, water samples were collected from 12 stations in the St. Lawrence River and analyzed for heavy metals at ultra-low detection limits. At the same time, samples were collected of the point source and tributary inputs to the river, water samples in the river for conventional pollutants, and suspended and bottom sediments for conventionals and metals. This report provides the results of the samplings. NR ON PR SC

1994-95 estimates, part I: the government expenditure plan

Canada. Dept. of Finance. Ottawa: Supply and Services Canada, Canada Communication Group,, Publishing, 1994. 71, 75 p.: Ill. Bilingual (Budget des dépenses...du gouvernement) ISBN 0-660-58975-3 CCG-P no. BT31-2/1995-I MICROLOG 94-04233

The Estimates communicate to Parliament the level and nature of the federal government's spending plans for the coming fiscal year. Part I gives Parliament an overview and situates the Estimates in the context of the overall expenditure framework. It covers the policy sector resource envelopes which Include the level of resources allocated for all elements of departmental activity and defines the resources earmarked for maintaining, developing and implementing policies and programs. Focuses also on person-years and presents an overall person-year summary. Presents totals for transfer payments, payments to Crown corporations and operating and capital expenditures. Also addresses items which represent investments requiring parliamentary approval.

The main estimates, or Part II, is the document that directly supports the Appropriation Act. The basic structural units are the Votes and Statutory items which total the proposed expenditures under each departmental or agency program. Presentation of the estimates is by ministry, department and agency, with a statement of objectives for each program, and activity descriptions, transfer payments and revolving funds. Crown corporations are also presented. Data is shown for the previous year to provide a basis for comparison. CA CO DE PA SS

This document provides estimates detail for the department and its programs primarily in terms of the results expected and the money spent. It begins with an overview of the roles and responsibilities of the portfolio and the spending plan for the coming fiscal year. This format is followed for the department and each of the programs administered. Administrative information includes a profile of financial requirements by object, personnel requirements, capital expenditures, transfer payments, revenue, loans, investments and advances, and the net cost of the program. Details include such information as personnel requirements, by occupational group, authorized person-years, and current salary range. Program descriptions include formal programs as well as activities related to government policy.

Acid Deposition Program : progress reports, 1991-92

Compiled by: Nirmal C. Das; submitted by: Alberta Research Council...et al.; submitted to: Alberta Environmental Protection. Vegreville, AB: The Centre, 1993. 415 p.: III., Bibl. ISBN 0-7732-6034-X MICROLOG 94-04356 (5 fiche)

This report documents the progress and results achieved during 1991-92 under the Acid Deposition Program, established in 1989 to establish reliable methods for prediction of acid deposition within

Alberta; to provide scientific and technical knowledge for limiting acid deposition to protect sensitive forest, take, and soil systems; and to monitor wet and dry deposition of acidic substances in sensitive areas of the province. To achieve these goals, research was begun on monitoring, emissions inventory and modelling, receptor response, and technology development. The report provides a preliminary estimate of sulphur loadings; an assessment of the acid rain mountain mesoscale model ARM3; acid deposition impacts on soils: long-term response, critical loadings, and target loadings; protocol method for ambient air sampling with the combined annular denuder-filter pack system; technology evaluation and chemical analysis progress report; and a comparison of methods for calculating effective acidity.

Inventory of quantitative information from active and abandoned mines in the Northwest Territories and assessment of the potential for acid rock drainage (ARD) within the mines' waste rock and tallings deposits. Of the 67 mines identified as relevant, only 27 could be evaluated because of lack of information. The mines were assessed for total stored volumes of tailings and waste rock; acid-generating potential of tailings and waste rock as determined by conventional acid base accounting tests; mineralogy of deposits, ore, and gangue; evidence of mineral oxidation in water chemistry data; type and abundance of sulphides in mine waste and tailings; length of time and conditions under which materials were exposed to weathering; and mitigative measures taken to limit or treat ARD arising from tailings and waste rock deposits. A summary of the geology for each individual mine is also included. CA ND NO NR SC

Dans ce document, nous examinons un ensemble de onze projets de démonstration récents financés par la Division des subventions nationales au bien-être social. Cinq de ces projets traitent de l'exploitation sexuelle des enfants; ils proposent des moyens de mieux organiser l'intervention à cet égard ou des méthodes de traitement utiles. Trois autres projets se penchent sur les questions de bien-être de l'enfance liées à la violence indirecte ou secondaire, à savoir le cas des enfants qui grandissent dans un milieu violent, même s'ils n'en sont pas les cibles, et celui des enfants que nous tentons de protéger en les plaçant dans un autre milieu. Les trois derniers projets visent à tester les modèles de soutien familial. Ce sont là des approches visant à mettre sur pied des réseaux soclaux plus forts pour les parents ou des structures de quartier profamiliales afin de s'attaquer aux probièmes sous-jacents qui rendent les mauvais traitements probables ou possibles. In 1984, the United States passed a regulation requiring passenger car manufacturers to progressively equip their vehicles with passive restraint devices for the two front outboard positions. In Canada, the regulations require the installation of three-point manual seat belts. Because of consumer preference and the U.S. regulation, it is expected that a growing number of vehicles soid in Canada will with be equipped with air bags at a cost of $200 for the driver's seat and $500 for full front seat protection. This study evaluated the effectiveness of regulating the mandatory installation of airbags into passenger vehicles soid in Canada after 1993 using a 10% discount rate for a a cost/benefit and a cost effectiveness analysis; and testing the sensitivity of the results to fleet growth rates, installation costs, seat belt usage rates, and other factors. BURIAL is a Fortran 77 computer program that calculates and draws the burial history curves of stratigraphic sections. It calculates inferred thermal ma-turity for a stratigraphic section over the course of its burial history and can post the value of the associated inferred thermal maturity parameter on the burial history diagram. The data thus represented can then be used in the evaluation of potential petroleum source rocks. Other information, such as the decompacted thicknesses of stratigraphic units and the thermal structure of rock sections through time can be used in paleographic analyses and petrological studies. This report describes stratigraphic analysis and the burial history model; the thermal environment of burial; and the calculation of the inferred thermal maturity of sediments. It also gives a sample calculation. CA DE NR PS SC

Blackleg of canola in Alberta: investigations on biology, epidemiology and management

By P.D. Kharbanda. Vegreville, AB: Alberta Environmental Centre, 1993. xiv, 85 p.: ill., Bibl. ISBN 0-7732-1253-1 MICROLOG 94-04386 (2 fiche)

Blackleg is a destructive disease of canola that has inflicted serious losses to Brassica crops around the world. To provide information on blackleg tolerance of the recently licensed canola cultivars under Alberta conditions, research demonstration plots were set up at two farms naturally infested with blackleg in regions 3 and 4 in summer 1992. This report describes the symptoms, the pathogen, disease epidemiology, occurrence and spread of the disease in Alberta, and disease management. AG AL PR SC

Blueprint for renewing government services using information technology: discussion draft

Ottawa: Treasury Board of Canada Secretariat, 1993. xvi, 73 p.: Ill. French ed. (Plan directeur pour le...): 94-04535/2
MICROLOG 94-04559 (1 fiche)

This biueprint describes an integrated, enterprise-wide approach to renewing government services through applying information technology. The objective is to transform government processes to better support program delivery to the public at a much reduced cost. It also proposes to take important steps in planning and deploying an enabling government iT infrastructure to support the re-engineering of program delivery, administrative renewal, and overall government restructuring.

CIDA's Policy for Environmental Sustainability aims to do two things, one with an internal and the other with an external focus. First, the policy provides guidance to CIDA managers and staff on objectives for programming which support environmental sustainability. Secondly, the policy informs CIDA's partners in Canada and developing countries of its objectives and encourages them to work together with CIDA in efforts to implement comprehensive and forward-looking programs which promote environmental sustainability. 'Cladophora' is a genus of the class Chlorophycaea (green algae) that grows attached to solid substrates as a branched macroscopic thallus. 'Cladophora' cells accumulate contaminants (certain metals and synthetic organic compounds) from the surrounding water, even when concentrations are very low, making it an excellent biomonitor of contaminants in water. This report presents data on samples collected from Collingwood Harbour, the St. Clair River, the Detroit River, Lake Erie, the Niagara River, Lake Ontario, Canagagigue Creek, and the Grand River. Samples were collected for determination of internal concentrations of elements and organic compounds from 1981-89, during June and July.

The first part of the study was completed using mainly incident optical microscopy, with preliminary work with confocal laser scanning microscopy carried out to elucidate morphology and fluorescence properties of some of the samples. Reflectance measurements were performed on both the outer and central areas of the catalyst extrudates to obtain a profile of the reflectance from the outer areas to the interior of the extrudates. Fluorescence properties as well as the isotropic and anisotropic character of the organic and inorganic deposits were determined. CA CM ND PS SC

The city of Prince Rupert now discharges municipal sewage effluent to the harbour through 12 outfalls, 11 of which discharge untreated sewage and only one of which receives primary treatment. To address concerns about odour and high coliform counts, the city is proposing to extend three of the present outfalls to deeper waters. To address environmental concerns about the extensions, an oceanographic study of the harbour was conducted in summer 1992 to identify and improve understanding of the oceanographic processes dominant in the harbour; to obtain a better description and understanding of the circuiation in the harbour, including an estimate of the degree of flushing or exchange that the waters experience; and to determine if the concern that dissolved oxygen levels in the harbour could be significantly depressed below levels observed outside the harbour was true.

The processes of change in natural areas, particularly over the long term, are poorly understood, giving an opportunity to apply emerging frameworks and methodologies for cumulative effects assessment to the issue of natural area changes. This re-port documents cumulative effects of land use ac-tivities on natural areas in Pusiinch Township in Wellington County in southern Ontario. This first involves the development of a conceptual model of cumulative effects on natural areas based on existing frameworks of cumulative environmental change. An analytical method is then designed to document change in spatial attributes of natural areas and to identify development activities associated with these changes. The method involves interpretation of aerial photographs and analysis of change in a geographic information system and can be applied to areas of intermediate size (town-ship, watershed) and to broad temporal scales (decades). The methodology demonstrates how cumulative effects concepts can be applied, including space and time crowding of effects, and accumula tion of perturbations. CA DE FE NR PL SC

The paper begins by out-lining the two models of executive power, then placing them within the context of environmental assessment under the Environmental Assessment Review Process Guidelines Order (EARPGO). It next examines the effect of judicial review upon the EARPGO, paying special attention to which model of decision-making the courts attempted to infuse into the assessment process. The Federal Government's response to this jurisprudence is then examined, particularly the model of decision-making power being promoted. The paper concludes with a brief discussion of the future prospects for the legalization of environmental assessment in Canada. CA DE EV FE SC

Le décroissement représente la somme des pertes de bols subles par la forêt, suite à la mortal-ité ou au retard de croissance. Les facteurs de décroissement comprennent la coupe, les incen-dies, de même que, par les dégâts qu'ils causent, les tempêtes, le déclin des forêts, les insectes et les maladies. Cette étude porte sur la relation entre les changements qui se produisent à travers le cycle de la vie des gens et les modifications que ces derniers apportent à leur logement ou à son usage. Pour ce faire on a comparé comment des familles comprenant des adolescents et des jeunes adultes ont réussi, au cours des années, à ajuster leur logement à leurs besoins. L'étude a été faite sur la base de données recueillies auprès de vingt familles qui étaient propriétaires et qui habitaient dans des plexs et des maisons uni-familiales de la région de Montréal depuis environ dix-sept ans. L'étude documente l'évolution des besoins résidentiels de la famille, les pressions que ces besoins exercent sur le logement et les caractéristiques architecturales qui entravent ou favorisent la réalisation de ces besoins. Elle donne des directives pour que les logements soient plus adaptables par rapport aux exigences dynamiques de la famille. CA ND PL SA SC

EARP and the aboriginal women of James Bay: a structural bias?

By S. Hawkes. Hull, PQ: Canadian Environmental Assessment Research Council, 1993. vil, 22 p.: Blbl. (Manuscript report / Canadian Environmental Assessment Research Council; MR2-93) MICROLOG 94-04308 (1 fiche)

This study examines the relationship between First Nations and the environmental and social impact assessment of large resource developments in the North, particularly whether there is a gender bias in the scoping provisions of the federal Environmental Assessment and Review Process (EARP). The study examined Phases I and II of the James Bay hydroelectric project in Northern Quebec, identifying a number of direct and indirect social effects through Interviews with men and women in the village of Chisasibi, the community most directly affected by Phase I. It also identified those impacts particular to women; whether there is a detectable gender bias within Cree society that may have led to women experiencing different effects or the same effects differently; whether the structure of the Cree society limits the extent to which women participated in public consultation efforts to identify potential impacts; and whether there is a bias in EARP against women. Strategies to control dryland seep are aimed at lowering or eliminating the high water table, thus reducing the capillary water movement to the surface. To evaluate the feasibility of vegetative controls, a study was carried out in southern Alberta to determine the economic feasibility and physical performance of flexible cropping and alfalfa to con-trol dryland salinity. Water table well depths and measures of salinity were also recorded. Nineteen producers with at least four years of economic data each were divided into the geographical areas of Barons-Champion, northwest of Lethbridge, Taber-Bow Island, east of Lethbridge, and Warner-Milk River, south of Lethbridge and the costs and returns for each field were evaluated. ### Environmental assessment of policy through budgetary analysis: conceptual framework and methods

By M.L.B. Jerrett. Hull, PQ: Canadian Environmental Assessment Research Council, 1993. 33 p.: III., Bibl. (Manuscript report / Canadian Environmental Assessment Research Council; MR5-93)

The need to apply environmental assessment to government policies that encourage environmentally damaging human behaviour is now generally accepted by leading environmental experts, although few methods exist for conducting them. Part of the problem lies in the complexity of the policy-making process, which confuses the identification of policies. This problem of policy identification can be partially overcome by focusing on the budget. This report begins with a rationale for why government budgets are the most appropriate unit of analysis for performing environmental assessment on govemment policy. A literature review is conducted on the methods for assessing the environmental ef-fects of policy, followed by an analysis of the inter-actions occurring among budgetary policies, hu-man economic behaviour, natural life support systems, and political systems. Methods of assessing the environmental implications of of government policy through government analysis are proposed and there is a discussion of promising directions for future research. Les droits de la personne ont été définis et adoptés officiellement au niveau international en 1948 dans la Déclaration universelle des droits de l'homme des Nations Unies. Cette déclaration historique et les conventions subséquentes de l'ONU ont défini la nature des droits civils, politiques, économiques, sociaux et culturels de la personne. Ce document se penche précisément sur les llens cruciaux entre les femmes, les droits de la personne et la démocratie.

Landfill leachates commonly contain a wide spectrum of organic and inorganic contaminants that may pose a threat to surface or groundwater use. A variety of treatment processes have been considered and evaluated for the treatment of landfill leachates, including both physical/chemical and biological treatment processes. This study provided a technical and economic assessment of a membrane-based process for treatment of landfill leachate that contained high levels of Iron and other metals, and relatively low levels of organics. A two-stage process incorporating precipitation/microfiltration to remove heavy metals and reverse osmosis to concentrate organics was developed and tested a pilot scale. EV ON PR SC

This report provides forest managers with information of pest conditions in Newfoundland, with regional information for national summaries, and forms a part of the historical record of pest conditions for Newfoundland. Insects, diseases, and conditions that were wide-spread, or that caused considerable concern are discussed in detail in the text, whereas those of lesser importance are presented in tabular form. The Forest insect and Disease Survey monitored the abundance of forest pests and their damage in forested areas throughout the Island and Labrador. The extent of major pest infestations was mapped, population levels sampled and the distribution of damage surveyed to provide their status. A forecast of infestations of major defoliators is provided as well.

This report explains the relationship between people's needs, government, and community responsibility, and the positive economic impact that is possible when services are provided to people when they need them. It acknowledges people's concerns about using deficit reduction as the sole rationale for setting spending priorities, and in so doing opens the door to rethinking spending and choosing in Saskatchewan. It contains a literature review and presents the information gleaned from the data collection processes. It also proposes a vision for human services and offers recommendations for achieving that vision.

Five locations at the Val d'Or experimental mine were instrumented with ground movement monitoring equipment to identify possible ground movement and assess the long-term stability of sensors and read-out equipment. Vibrating wire sensors were used to determine borehole convergence and potentiometers were used in extensometers to measure axial deformations of 75.7 mm drill holes. Most of the readings were taken and stored with automatic data logging equipment. Most of the connections were hard wired from sensor locations to data logger, but in two cases encoding radio transmitters were used to transmit the sensor output to a receiver station/data logger. Manual readings were taken for the extensometers located in holes number one and four. In total, 17 instruments containing 52 sensors were installed in five boreholes.

British Columbia metal mines are regulated by a variety of provincial and federal government agencles that are coordinated under the provincial Mine Development Assessment Process (MDAP). This study evaluates the regulation of 15 proposed and operating metal mines in B.C. based on interviews with 63 government regulators, mining company executives, and public interest groups. The mines sample includes half the producing mines reviewed under the MDRP from 1984-90 and one quarter of the projects under review in 1990. Study participants identified issues associated with coordination of federal and provincial agencies, adequacy of government personnel, public participation, monitoring, follow-up, wildlife protection, and integrated land use planning. These issues were analyzed based on the responses of participants and a review of relevant governmental documentation. The report discusses the results of the analysis and makes recommendations where shortcomings are identified. BC CA DE EV FE NR SC

Impacts of tile drainage on water quality

By J.D. Paine and W.E. Watt. Toronto: Ministry of the Environment, Research and Technology, Branch, Environmental Research Program, 1994. x, 133 p. : III., maps, Bibl. ISBN 0-7778-9896-5 MICROLOG 94-04345 (2 fiche)

This report describes the processes involved in movement of contaminants through the soil or over the surface and into tiles or ditches draining agricultural fields, incorporates an understanding of these processes into a physically-based model, collects field data for calibration and verification, uses the model to evaluate the effects of tile drainage on water quality, and provides guidance on potential management strategies. Algorithms to represent processes for chemical transport through the soil profile and into the tile drains were developed and incorporated into TILE, a continuous, physicallybased hydrologic simulation model for tile-drained agricultural fields and basins. Data for model testing and calibration came from a cooperative field program on a tile-drained corn field and from field studies undertaken to define the physical parameters required by the model, including saturated hydraulic conductivity, soil type and depth, drainable porosity, and infiltration characteristics. Testing of the water quality algorithms for the pesticide employed (metolachlor) was undertaken and scenarios involving the application of pesticides and fertilizers and the timing of rainfall were evaluated to de-termine the potential effects on nutrient or pesticide loss from the fields through the tile drains or from surface runoff.

Improving child and family welfare: a summary and reconsideration of 11 recent National Welfare Grant demonstration projects

This paper examines a set of 11 recently funded National Welfare Grants demonstration projects from this vantage point. Five deal with child sexual abuse, either in terms of how to organize our response to it more effectively or what treatment approaches are useful. Three consider child welfare issues that are related to indirect or secondary abuse: children who grow up with violence even if they are not the targets; and children whom we try to protect by taking into alternative care. The final trio of projects tests family support models. These are approaches that try to develop stronger parental social networks or pro-family neighborhood structures to attack the underlying problems that cause or permit abuse.

Microstructural characterization of hydrogen cracks in HAZ regions of selected pipeline steels

By J.A. Gianetto, J.E.M. Braid and J.T. Bowker. Ottawa: Canada Centre for Mineral and Energy Technology, Metals, Technology Laboratories, 1992. II, 37 p.: III., Bibl. (Report / Metals Technology Laboratories (Canada); MTL 92-6(TR)) MICROLOG 94-04454 (1 fiche)

Hydrogen induced cold cracking during pipeline construction is a major problem despite significant advances made in steel development and welding technology and the fact that such cracking has oc curred in reheated HAZ regions that exhibit relatively soft, mainly ferritic microstructures has raised concerns within the pipeline industry. This work identified microstructural features that established a possible link between the microstructure and sensitivity to hydrogen induced cold cracking. The re-port presents the results of slow bend experiments on one commercial and four experimental steels in which the high-low offset was eliminated and the tests were discontinued at the onset of cracking. The HAZ microstructures of the partially-loaded slow bend test coupons were characterized in terms of the general microstructures and specific microstructural features related to the formation of hydrogen induced cold cracks, particularly in areas where isolated incipient microcracks had formed.

Various HAZ regions of the commercial steel were simulated using a Gleeble 1500 to provide a better understanding of the transformation behaviour of a steel known to be sensitive to hydrogen induced cold cracking in the reheated HAZ, despite displaying a predominantly ferritic microstructure.

The Microstructure of financial derivatives markets: exchange-traded versus overthe-counter in this report the author focuses on the microstructure of derivatives markets. While the primary objective is to examine derivatives markets in Canada, the author also discusses certain developments in global derivatives markets that are bound to influence the functioning and development of financial markets in a small, open economy such as Canada's. It is argued that most of the characteristics that have traditionally differentiated the two derivatives market structures, organized exchanges and over-the-counter markets, are no longer clearly defined.

This report examines the potential for and the nature of municipal employment of environmental assessment (EA) in land-use planning by developing models for MEA. It also discusses some of the challenges and barriers to their adoption and implementation through a literature review and personal interviews with officials from nine municipali-ties in Ontario. The report reviews recent studies of MEA in Canada, how municipal governments are structured and function, and the current land-use planning processes. It then discusses the three general types of MEA, site EA, plan EA, and areawide EA. After a consideration of ideal EA and planning models, five general levels of integration between EA and planning processes are presented. The three general levels of EA-planning integration are then combined with the three general types of MEA processes to produce nine general frame works for incorporating EA at the municipal level. ### Oldman River Dam Mitigation Program downstream vegetation project report, volume II: the potential effects of an operating plan for the Oldman River Dam on riparian cottonwood forests

By J.M. Mahoney. Edmonton: Alberta Public Works, Supply and Services, 1993. 188 p.: III.,

MICROLOG 94-04378 (2 fiche)

Extensive cottonwood (poplar) forests exist in the Oldman River valley downstream of the Oldman River dam. Studies of similar forests in nearby river valleys and elsewhere on the western prairies have found significant declines of some riparian forests following river damming. This investigation was initlated to determine the causes of cottonwood forest decline downstream from existing dams in southern Alberta; inventory the existing river valley for-ests in the Oldman Basin; establish study sites in the Oldman River forests to monitor changes in forest status following commissioning of the Oldman River dam, and evaluate the probable impact of proposed operating plans for the Oldman River dam and associated water control structures on downstream forests. This report summarizes the progress made in the analyses of the probable effects on the survival of the forests, including a discussion of the hydrological conditions essential for cottonwood forest regeneration and an explanation of the effects of altering these characteristics on ri-parian forests; the hydrological alterations expect-ed along various river reaches in the Oldman Basin with the implementation of the proposed OD05 Oldman Dam operating plan; and preliminary analyses of the problem impacts of the OD05 operating plan on the cottonwood forests along these reaches. In 1991, the Alberta Environmental Centre initiated a five-year research project on mercury in fish inhabiting the newly formed Oldman River Dam Reservoir and rivers within the Oldman River Basin because of concerns that mercury concentration in fish might increase after impoundment. The study was conducted to assess changes in the concentration of mercury in the muscle tissue of fish in the Oldman Dam Reservoir, the Oldman River near the reservoir, and the Crowsnest River; and to conduct supplementary inventory studies of fish populations in the reservoir and surrounding rivers. Fish collected at six sites included mountain whitefish, rainbow trout, bull trout, brown trout, white sucker, longnose sucker, northern pike, and burbot. Total mercury concentration in muscle tissues was assayed in 409 fish and organic mercury concentration in 123 fish. AL FI LS PR SC

While aquatic plants play a key role in maintaining the biological productivity of healthy aquatic ecosystems and are an important component of fish habitat, in Southern Ontario many waters now contain excessive plant growth. As a result, limited control of aquatic plants for recreational purposes may be appropriate. Such control must be carried out so as to protect fish habitat. This report presents procedural and technical guidelines for a rational and consistent approach to the review of public proposals for aquatic plant control. Among the factors considered are the identification of fish habitat.

Organotin compounds possess formidable blocidal properties and have found global acceptance in many fields for this reason. Since the mid-1980s, various government and university groups have been engaged in monitoring and research activities to examine the nature and extent of organotin contamination in British Columbia coastal waters. This report presents an overview of available data for butyitin and other organotin compounds, most of it related to highly contaminated areas. There is little information available for the subsistence fisheries. The report concludes with recommendations for future studies in geochemistry, analytical chemistry, and blology.

Description of the first part of the first phase of a project to evaluate the potential of plasma arc for treating special waste. Part I of the evaluation consisted of a technology evaluation followed by as-sessment of economic feasibility and research and development needs. Information was gathered by literature search and interviews. The report gives a summary of plasma arc technology; the current status of remelting/vitrification, remelting/vitrification and thermal destruction, thermal destruction only, and pyrolysis; and an assessment of the technology, including cost, utilization of the uniqueness of the technology; and R&D needs.

Plastic and peat seed shelters improve stocking

Seed shelters provide an improved microclimate for seed germination and physically protect seeds against predation and burial by wind and rain. Scandinavian-made photodegradable open-ended plastic cones that anchor to the ground and are seeded manually or by using hand-operated me chanical seeders are most often used but their cost and their slow decomposition rates under shade have prompted a search for alternates. This note reports on a trial that compared temperature variations and jack pine stocking levels in peat shelters, plastic shelters, and bare ground. CA FO LS ND ON SC

In 1982, under the auspices of the Acidic Precipitation in Ontario Study (APIOS), investigations were undertaken on two forested watersheds in the Muskoka-Haliburton area of Ontario. A major component of the investigations was the monitoring of hydrological pathways and the flux of materials in and out of the watershed as well as between watershed compartments. The monitoring included the collection and chemical characterization of precipitation water at three points along the path from the atmosphere to the forest floor. This report describes the methodologies employed in monitoring incident precipitation, throughfall, and stemflow, and the rationale behind these methods. It describes the techniques used to validate data and generate data estimates in cases were the original data were rejected as invalid or were not collected.

Preliminary concept study of district heating and cooling of downtown Saskatoon, Saskatchewan, focusing on the use of the Queen Elizabeth Power Station as a heat source: a report

By K.A. Birch. Saskatoon, SK: Saskatchewan Energy Conservation and Development Authority, 1993. 49 p.: III., maps, Bibl. MICROLOG 94-04624 (1 fiche)

This report explores the possibility of providing district heating and cooling to downtown Saskatoon, Saskatchewan using waste heat from the Queen Elizabeth Power Station. The study explored the history and the major components, operation, and maintenance of the power station and conducted a preliminary evaluation to determine the technical feasibility of extracting steam from the generating units. A sample of buildings in the downtown core was selected and reviewed to determine their fuel consumption and floor area to establish an average annual thermal energy requirement per square metre. The energy requirement for the downtown core was projected based on an estimate of the floor area contained in the downtown and the heat demand was calculated based on a load duration curve for heating in the province. A modified approach was used for estimating the cooling in downtown Saskatoon and this was then factored into the conceptual plans. The concept was then expanded to include the University of Saskatchewan, City Hospital, and St. Paul's Hospital to Improve system reliability and load factor.

A stretch of Highway 1 between Lepreau and Musquash is being upgraded to four lanes under a federal and provincial cost-sharing agreement. As part of its routine environmental review, Public Works Canada prepared an environmental screening document that described the geology and mineralization of the area. Because a base metal sulphide zone occurs in the vicinity of the Musquash Reservoir, an investigation of the acid drainage potential of bedrock along the highway was carried out. Field work for the project was carried out in summer 1993. This report provides the results of the investigation.

The Northern River Basins study was initiated in 1991 to understand and characterize the cumulative effects of development on the water and aqua-tic environment of the Peace, Slave, and Athabasca Rivers. Extensive uranium mine-mill operations were in place around Lake Athabasca from the 1950s to the 1980s and some mining continues today. Residents of the area are concerned that tailings from these mines may enter Lake Athabasca causing radioisotope contamination of the fish. The study performed radiochemical analysis and biological examinations of northern pike, suckers, and lake whitefish collected in February 1993 from Lake Athabasca near Bustard Island and Hook Point. A complete analysis for all the major, naturally occurring radioisotopes was conducted and the fish were examined for abnormal growth problems or diseases. The Municipal-Industrial Strategy for Abatement (MISA) program is a regulatory program whose ulti-mate goal is the virtual elimination of persistent toxic contaminants in municipal and industrial discharges into Ontario waterways. MISA effluent monitoring regulations were promulgated for nine industrial sectors, including the inorganic chemical sector. The regulations required direct dischargers to sample and analyze their effluents for 12 consecutive months. This report assesses the quality assurance/quality control (QA/QC) data that was submitted by the 22 ICS plants along with the effluent monitoring data. The assessment process was used to evaluate the sultability of the effluent monitoring data for use in the effluent limits setting process and to confirm the presence/absence of contaminants in the effluent, intake, once-through cooling water, and storm water streams. The Northern River Basin study was initiated in 1991 to understand and characterize the cumulative effects of development on the water and aquatic environment of the Peace, Slave, and Athabasca Rivers. This report provides a generalized working knowledge of the pulp and paper mill treatment processes and the contaminants generally associated with their effluents. It discusses the technological differences between bleached kraft pulp mills, bleached chemi-thermomechanical pulp mills and newsprint operations, using information from plants elsewhere in the country and from experi-ences gained from around the world. Topical contaminants discussed include general wastewater variables, such as chemical oxygen demand, blochemical oxygen demand, dissolved organic carbon, nutrients, suspended solids, sulphur, colour, and turbidity, and other variables such as toxicity, resin acids, steroids, chelating substances, adsorbable organic halogens, chlorophenols, diox-Ins and furans, chlorates, and metals. A glossary is included. A dBAse IV database called NORTHDAT provides summary data on the quality of licensed effluents for 1990-92. AL CA EV FO ND SC

In the planning of dynamic architecture telecommunications networks, considerations of sizing of the links lead to a multi-commodity, multi-period flow problem on the underlying graph. A formulation based on the edge-chain representation of the network reveals a structure that can be exploited in two steps. First the generalized upper bounding (GUB) technique is used to take advantage of the multi-commodity nature of the problem by reduc-tion to a working basis. Then the multi-period aspect of the problem is further exploited by a decomposed triangular factorization of the working basis. In each step of the algorithm, the problem is decomposed into as many subproblems as there are periods, where each subproblem has size equivalent to that of a single period problem. PR PS QU SC TE Literature review of various existing or in-progress sources of information from the Federal and Quebec Governments and from various non-governmental organizations and private sector groups and institutions. The report first gives a general description of the environment, including the pelagic, wetland, open, forest, and Island and marginal environments; then describes the types of wildlife habitats and those considered essential. Each of these environments is characterized in more detail and representative species are described. The report Identifies the types of stresses placed on the various environments and the repercussions of those stresses, then describes measures taken to promote protection of both the species and the natural environments of the river.

The pollution of bathing beaches on the Great Lakes and inland waters occurs often as a result of the discharge of rivers and streams into near-shore waters. While turbidity is often a result, the major impact is the increase in fecal coliforms and *Escherichia coli*. Total viable bacteria increase in conjunction with these parameters. This study determined to what extent the particulates contributing to the turbidity of the water were transporting bacteria to the beach waters. Samples were collected from three agricultural drains suspected of impacting bathing beaches with elevated bacterial levels. The samples were analyzed by electronic zone sensing to size and count the suspended particles. Analyses of the samples involved direct viable cell count and Salmonelia determinations using epifluorescence and immunofluorescence microscopy to establish the numbers of bacteria sorbed to the suspended particulates of the agricultural drains. A bacterial transport study was also conducted.

In 1993, surficial geology (regolith) mapping of the Fosterville map area was carried out as part of the Southern Pokiok Batholith Quaternary geology and till geochemistry project, begun in 1990. Mapping involved the examination, description, and identification of the surficial materials at regular intervals along the road network in the area. Follow-up till sampling was conducted in the geochemical anomaly areas identified by the 1992 till-sampling program. Additional basal till samples were collected from a number of other sites to provide additional data. Samples were collected from the Dead Creek lead-zinc quartz float site and the Oak Mountain tingold bearing quartz float site. Samples were also collected of several mineralized quartz cobbles and boulders encountered during mapping.

Certainly there is no consensus on how big it is. The suspension of federal sex offenders on conditional release is an important measure of post-release adjustment to the community and reflects one aspect of a relapse prevention program. While the reasons for suspending an offender can be quite varied, the execution of a warrant on any offender is most often associated with indicators of impending danger of re-offence. This document presents findings of research which examined the use of survival analysis to explore the time until suspension for sex offenders on conditional release.

Tabu search is a relatively new general heuristic framework successfully applied to a wide variety of hard combinatorial optimization points. In two previous projects, three variants of this approach were developed for the unweighted maximum clique problem, two deterministic ones and a probabilistic one. These algorithms were extensively tested on randomly-generated problems and were found to be very effective in that context. This paper evaluates the performance of these algorithms on the benchmark instances of the second DIMACS Challenge that, along with the results reported previously, will provide a fairly precise assessment of the merits of the heuristics.

Since nuclear fuel generates a decreasing amount of heat because of the decay of the contained radionuclides, the effects of increased temperatures on the properties of the rock are very important. This thermal cracking experiment was conducted to determine the threshold temperature of thermal cracking in the Lac du Bonnet granite sampled from the Underground Research Laboratory site; calculate the effects of thermal cracking on physical properties that may be important for disposal vault design; and provide data used in evaluating models that estimate microcrack population changes caused by temperature changes. The threshold temperature was determined by monitoring acoustic emissions during slow heating of samples to various temperatures up to 205C. The effect of thermal cracking was determined from measurements of P and S-wave velocities before and after heating. CA DE NR SC

The boys were tested and interviewed on arrival in the training school system. Three months later their behavior was evaluated by teachers and supervisors. After three years they were followed up and interviewed again. This report concerns a second follow-up when the men had reached approximately thirty years in age. The purpose of the report is to describe what happened to the men in terms of criminal behavior up to the age of thirty years and to predict adult criminal behavior.

During the end of November and the first part of December 1993, stakeholders of Alberta's agriculture and food industry participated in a consultation process to help the Ministry develop a three-year business plan. Approximately 650 people from throughout the industry attended meetings in Grande Prairie, Lacombe, and Vauxhall. This report summarizes the public responses during the consulation. Where possible, graphs have been used to present the information. It also includes additional comments from the participants after each set of graphs.

Toward teacher growth: a study of the impact of Alberta's teacher evaluation policy

Edmonton: Alberta Education, 1993. II, 303 p.: Blbl. ISBN 0-7732-1107-1 MICROLOG 94-04519 (4 fiche)

Alberta jurisdictions have been required since June 1985 to have in place and to implement a policy on teacher evaluation. This study explores the impact of these policies on teachers and teaching and looks at linkages between teacher evaluation and educational leadership at the school and system levels. Its purpose is to establish the impact of provincial and local teacher evaluation polices on teachers and training; to provide guidelines for school system personnel in their efforts to refine and improve teacher evaluation policies; and to describe the impact of system and school leadership on policy implementation and on teaching in schools.

Traditional ecological knowledge and the environmental process

By W. Smith. Hull, PQ: Canadian Environmental Assessment Research Council, 1993. iii, 29 p. (Manuscript report / Canadian Environmental Assessment Research Council; MR7-93) MICROLOG 94-04313 (1 fiche)

This report focuses on the value of local knowledge and practices and the need to incorporate these factors into the environmental assessment (EA) process through the addition of traditional ecological knowledge (TEK). A case study of a group in northwestern Tanzania is used to show the range of local knowledge and how this can complement traditional western scientific knowledge in the EA process. The study examined local knowledge and practices to see what is important locally and may be of value to an EA; conducted a study of woody vegetation to collect baseline data; examined how these two types of information can be used in the EA process within the context of local, regional, and national practices; and investigated how the data could be translated into resource management strategies and land use plans.

Urban form and sustainable urban development : an ecosystem approach to growth management

By R. Tomalty. Huil, PQ: Canadian Environmental Assessment Research Council, 1993. 45 p.: Bibl. (Manuscript report / Canadian Environmental Assessment Research Council; MR4-93) MICROLOG 94-04310 (1 fiche)

This report explores the idea of sustainable urban development as an emerging concept in the integration of land use planning and environmental protection. The report argues that the management of urban form on a regional scale is crucial to achieving sustainable development in the urban region. Toward this end, a regional growth management framework based on ecosystem planning concepts is proposed. An overview of growth management in the Toronto region allows insight into how current growth management regimes would have to be adapted to incorporate ecosystem planning principles.

This literature review is intended to contribute to the consolidation of the broader socio-technical basis for increasing urban sustainability. It provides a framework for discussing the basic elements of the stewardship approach, highlighting the nature of the proposed cure, tracing the genealogy of its elements through the literature, and building consensus for the treatment. The review uses other models, in addition to the Ontario Resource Stewardship Model, to highlight features of the stewardship approach. The report looks at the topic of waste management from the perspective of urban management and environmental protection using the historical situation in the Greater Toronto Area (GTA) to exemplify the issues, then discusses sustainable development, resource conservation, and responsibility for stewardship, the three major components of the approach.

The Northern River Basins study was initiated in 1991 to understand and characterize the cumulative effects of development on the water and aquatic environment of the Peace, Slave, and Athabasca Rivers. The mixing characteristics study focused on the calculation of mixing coefficients using field dye-tests on the Athabasca River between the towns of Athabasca and Bitumount from February to March 1992. The test was completed under low-flow, ice covered conditions in late winter, the period most critical for potential impacts on the aquatic system. Twelve sample sites were selected within the 464 km study area and the river was divided into three reaches in which separate tracer dye experiments were performed to determine travel times and dispersion coefficients.
